

Two winding paths separate the houses from the green fields.

A winding road separates the textured fields from the lush green forest below.

A small white building sits near the curved edge of the forest.

The green river separates the brown blocky fields.